EMAC and Public Assistance - 2017 Winter Storms

Cal OES Recovery Division identified the need for Public Assistance subject matter experts to assist with the aftermath of the 2017 Severe Winter Storms. Accordingly, Cal OES requested assistance from other states through the Emergency Management Assistance Compact (EMAC) - the Nation's mutual-aid system. New Jersey and Colorado provided personnel that arrived on Monday, 06/13/17. Both states along with other potential states will be providing support between now and the beginning of September at various Joint Field Offices throughout California. The goal is to assist those impacted counties in identifying disaster related damage and program eligibility.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

 Very Hot/Dry All PSA's Through Sunday, with North Winds Today and Thursday Producing High Risk Conditions in the Sacramento Valley and Surrounding Foothills ***

 Isolated Lightning Possible Higher Terrain Mt Lassen South Again Today

Strong high pressure will remain over the Northern California region through Sunday. NW-NE surface winds will be 10-20 mph with maximum gusts to 25-35 mph and locally higher in wind-prone areas from the western Sierra slopes to the coastal mountains today through midday Thursday, with gusty NE winds continuing on the western Sierra slopes Thursday night. Temperatures will continue 15-20 degrees above normal each afternoon, with RH dropping to 10-20%, and as low as 5-15% in the wind-affected areas. Humidity will only recover to 30-40% in the windy areas. Isolated thunderstorms are expected this afternoon from Mt Lassen south, mainly above 3500 ft elevation where fuels the ground are quite moist or still snow-covered. The hot and dry conditions will continue Friday through Sunday, but with lighter winds. Afternoon and evening thunderstorm chances will continue in the Sierra south of highway 50. The high pressure ridge is expected to weaken as a low pressure trough moves in on Monday, bringing temperatures down but also giving a chance of thunderstorms.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

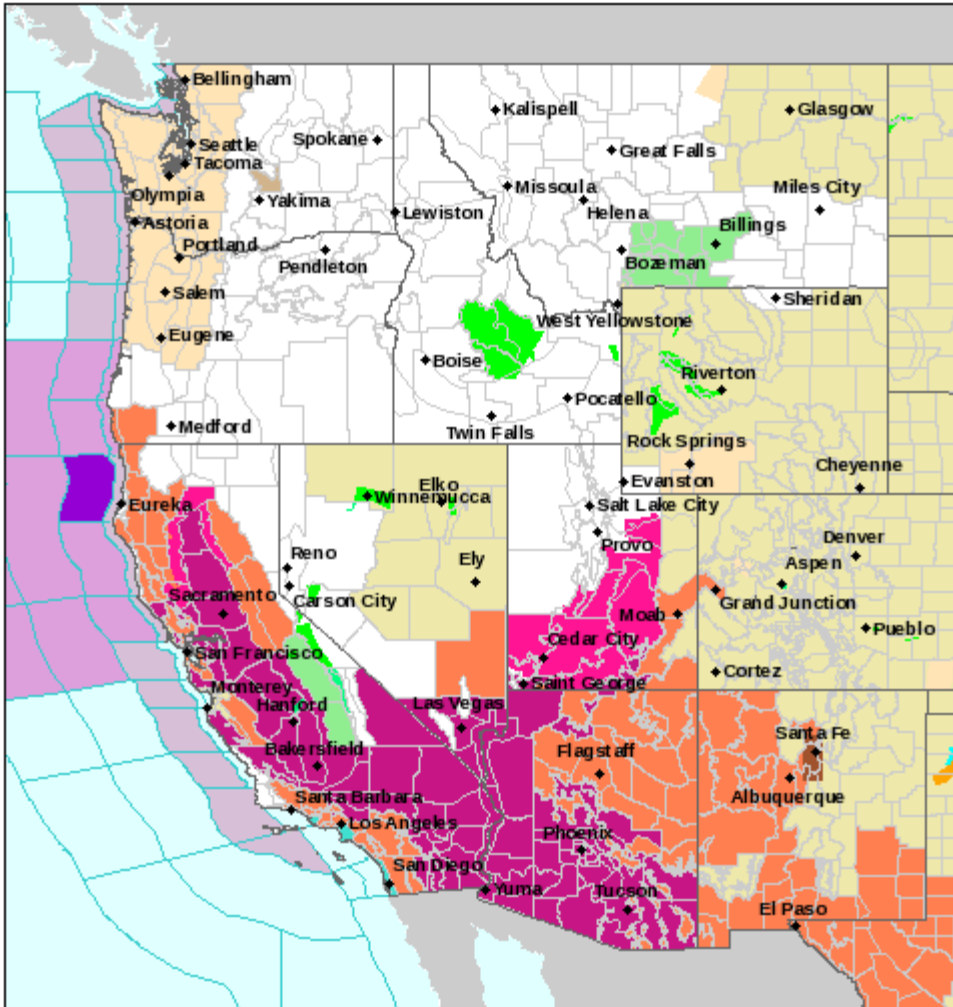

Hot temperatures, low afternoon RH next several days*

Turning breezy in the passes and canyons later this week

Strong high pressure will continue to generate near record high temperatures through Friday before onshore flow brings a slow cooling trend to the area. Today, expect temperatures to climb a degree or two from yesterdays readings. Highs will be 100-103 in the valleys and lower foothills, 105-110 in the San Joaquin Valley and up to 125 in the low desert. Minimum RH readings will drop into the 8-12% range below 7,000 feet across inland areas away from the coast. Thursday, onshore flow may develop late in the afternoon. This will result in west to southwest winds of 15-25 mph with gusts to 35 mph to develop in and near the Antelope Valley and the Banning Pass. Temperatures may drop a few degrees along the coast, but expect similar temperatures to occur inland. Isolated showers and thunderstorms will be possible during the afternoon hours once again near the Sierra Crest Thursday through the weekend. Expect breezy conditions each afternoon in the aforementioned areas Friday through Sunday. Temperatures will drop to within a few degrees of normal (outside the desert) with highs returning to the 90s in the valleys by Sunday and Monday. North winds of 10-20 mph may develop Friday afternoon into Saturday morning across Santa Barbara County and the I-5 Corridor. Most areas will see lighter winds by Sunday.
